Satun

Prior to A.D. 1813, Satun was a district of Kedah, known as Mukim Setul, meaning “the district of santol tree” Historically, Satun had a strong link with Kedah until A.D. 1909, under the Anglo-Siamese Agreement, when the Siamese government then agreed to relinquish the states of Kedah, Kelantan, Trengganu, and Perlis to Britain in exchange for the British’s renunciation of its Extra-territorial Rights in Siam (former name of Thailand). The consequence of the Anglo-Siamese Agreement shifted the status of Satun from being part of Kedah to that of Monthon Phuket and later in 1925 was under the jurisdiction of Monthon Nakhon SiThammarat. When democratic reform was introduced in Thailand in 1932, Satun SiThammarat. When democratic reform was introduced in Thailand in 1932, Satun was then promoted to be one of the provinces in the South.

Satun consists of seven administrative districts (Amphoe) and one sub-district (King-Amphoe): Amphoe Muang Satun, La-ngu, Thung Wa, Khuan Kalong, Khuan Don, Tha Phae; and King-Amphoe Manang.

Satun has a population of 241,130, of which 66.9 percent are Muslims.

The unique bi-cultural characteristics of the people in Satun reflect social harmony among the people of two faiths: Buddhists and Muslims. In addition, Satun also hosts the cultures of an indigenous group called Choa Lea (Orak Lawoi), Orang Laut or Sea Gypsies or an official label of Thai Mai (recently naturalized Thai) whose settlements can be found on Lipeh Island, Tambon Koh Sarai, Amphoe Muang Satun; and on Bulone Island. These people observe distinctively different cultures and traditions from those of the local people.

Ku Den's Mansion

(Satun National Museum)

Location : In the municipality of Rong Ammartri Phraya Phuminart Phakdi (Tuanku Baharuddin bin Tamma-ngong), the governor of Satun. The two-storey building has been largely influenced by Western styled architecture: particularly the windows and doors which are of Roman motifs. This is due to the fact that the builder of the mansion was imported from Penang (Penang was then under the British protectorate). The roofs were designed with the Thai's Panya style. The windows were assembled with narrow strips of boards arranged horizontally. The semi-circular clay tiles were used to cover the roofs. The ventilation at the upper front of the building is decorated with star shaped designs, intimately influenced by Muslim architecture. On one occasion the mansion was used as an accommodation for Somdet Chao Far Boriphatra Sukhumphanth Krom Phra Nakhorn Woranit, the Minister of Interior during his official trip to the Southern provinces in 1930. Later Ku Den's heirs donated the property to the government which had been used to house various government offices such as Satun Municipality, Provincial City Hall, Muang Satun District Office, and Office of Internal Security Operations Command-Satun Branch, respectively.

Now the building has been placed under the jurisdiction of the Fine Arts Department for maintenance and preservation, and in the near future it is to be turned into a Museum for Islamic Studies. It is an interesting place to visit.

Central Mosque

(Masjid Bambang)

Location: on Satun Thani Road in the Municipality of Satun.

Previously Masjid Bambang was a one storey building surrounded with a fence Its unique tree-tier roofs were arranged in a pyramid shape with the smallest one on the top and the largest at the bottom to cover the whole building. The floors were covered with brown tiles. The interior was measured 13 meters both in length and width and the building was Supported by four wooden poles. The condition of the Masjid has deteriorated because of its volatile wooden structures and also the size was too small to accommodate worshipper performing prayers. It was then uprooted and rebuilt in the same plot of land. The new building, showing modern Islamic architectural styles, was completed in May 1979.

Old Building on Buri Wanich Road

Location: On Buri Wanich Road in Satun Municipality area. The 600 meter long row houses provide pedestrian space under the shade of the upper floor. The front of the concrete walled houses consist of three parts: the Roman styled color glass arch at the top, the wooden board venetian blinds in the middle, and the solid concrete bottom. These building previously called Phraya Phoomin Phakdi's Row houses are believed to have been built during the same period as Ku Den's Mansion. Now some of the houses have been dismantled but most pasts still remain.

Khao Phya Wang

TARUTAO NATIONAL PARK

(ASEAN's National Heritage)

About 51 large and small islands in the straits of Malacca in the Indian Ocean have been established as "Tarutao National Park" as proclaimed in the Royal Gazette of April 20 B.E. 2517. The park consists of 7 large island namely, Tarutao, Adang, Rawi, Lipeh (Nipis), Dong (Budang), Lek (Bisi) and Kland (Tengah).

Later UNESCO proclaimed the Tarutao National Park as the "Heritage of ASEAN" a place to be protected and conserved for people all over the world to appreciate.

Tarutao National Park is situated in Tambon Koh Sarai, Amphoe Muang Satun, Satun Province. It is on the west coast of Thailand, near the Straits of Malacca in the Indian Ocean about 40 kilometers from Satun and only 5 kilometers from Langkawi Island on the Malaysian side.

Of all the islands in this marine park, system, Tarutao is the largest encompassing an area of 151 square kilometers or an equivalent of 44,345 rai. It is 11 kilometers wide and 24 kilometers long. Most of the area is rocky mountains with the highest slope of 708 meters. Most plains can be found in the valleys and sea shores.

Tourist Spots on Tarutao

Tarutao consists of many large and small coves and bays around the island, each of which runs a small stream flowing from the central part of the island into the sea on the western side.

Ao Pante Malacca

(Pante Malacca Bay) is where the headquarters of the Tarutao National Park is located. At the front of the bay runs a canal from the eastern side to the west.

Ao Talok Wau and Talok Udang

(Talok Wau and Talok Udang Bays) are the two bays which share similar natural and scenic characteristics. In addition to natural attractions and scenic beauty on the island, visitors to Tarutao also are attracted by historical remains when the island was once used as a maximum security center for first degree criminals and political prisoners, a place reminiscent of pains and bitterness suffered by the detainees. Traces of the building structures such as a 10-kilometer road linking between two detention centers (one at Ao Talok Wau and the other at also ruins of housing for prison staff, a concrete tank for storing fish, tombs, brick furnaces for producing charcoal, and various other utensile.

Ao Talok Udang is a unique in that it is located on the lowest point of the island, with a long history, and the existence of a cave with much sought-after edible swallow's nests.

Tham Charakae

(Crocodile Cave) is located next to Malacca canal. It is named after the myth in which the place was once a sanctuary for thousands of crocodiles. The only time to enter the cave is during the high tide with a rowing boat when the tide flows into the cave. Similarly, visitors must get out of the cave during the low tide when the water flow back to the entrance of the cave. Half way inside the cave is small flat land for visitors to walk on and enjoy the beauty of the unspoiled, exotic stalagmites and stalctites.

Strip of Rock at Haad Talok Wau

According to the latest geological survey, it is believed that the oldest rock found in Thailand is not that of "Phuket type" as earlier understood but it is the one found on Tarutao Island, a red solid sandstone with difference sizes of layer formation, thick or thin due to corrosion from water.

Ao Son

(Son Bay) as the most beautiful long pure sand beach in Tarutao Island. The three kilometers long beach is ideal for swimming because there is a fresh water source nearby for swimmers to clean themselves after swimming.

In addition to tourist attractions on Tarutao Island, There are also plenty of places to visit on the Tarutao archipelago.

Koh Klang

(Klang Islands). This group of islands is about 20 kilometers west of Tarutao Island. Two of the islands, Koh Klang and Koh Khai are located halfway between Tarutao and Adang Island. Koh Khai is a splendid place and an egg-laying group for a large number of sea turtles, with pristine, fine, sandy beaches, and a large stone arch jutting from a hill near the beach into the blue sea. The arch was first used as a logo for Tarutao National Park and later became a symbol for Tourism Business of Satun. The only means of transportation to Koh Klang and Koh Khai Island is by boat which can proceed from Tarutao or Adang Islands.

Beacause of its location in the southwest monsoon zone, the Tarutau archipelgo is exposed to rainfalls all year round. Most of the jungles are of rain forest type with warieties of plant species and are the sanctuaries for wild animals such as domesticated turned wild buffaloes. These animals were neglected and then turned untamed like their wild counterparts. At present, however, these animals have been hunted down and they are on the verge of becoming extinct. In addition, the island also teems with wild boars, monkey, mouse deer, and species of birds such as guffaws, swallows, doves, and red and white hawks.

Transportation to Tarutau National Park

From Hatyai, follow Highway No.406 to Satun and get on to Highway No.4078 at Chalong T-intersection to Amphoe Langu and proceed further to Pak Bara.

By Bus: Take a Hatyai-Satun bus from Hatyai; get off at Chalong T-intersection; take a Satun-La-ngu bus or take a minibus from Chalong T-intersection straight to Pak Bara Pier.

By taxi: There is a taxi service from Hatyai to La-ngu which operates between 6:00-17:00 hours daily; then board a minibus from La-ngu to Pak Bara. Taxi Stand in Hatyai: opposite the Post Office on Rattakarn Road. Hatyai.

By Air-conditioned Van: A Hatyai Pak Bara air-conditioned van service operated daily between 06:00-16:00 hours. A van leaves every hour and the trip takes hour and 50 minutes. The van stand is on Prachathipat Road. For information, call (074) 245655.

Boat Service: The Pak Bara-Tarutao boat services run during the tourist season (November 15-May 15) with the following schedules.

Che Bilang Pier: A deep sea pier 13 kilometers from the town of Satun is located in Tambon Che Bilang. Amphoe Muang Satun. There is no regular boat service to the island from this pier but holiday-makers can hire fishing boats there to go to Tarutau national park, which is 30 kilometers away.

Access to other islands in the archipelago depends on seasons. travelling during the southwest monsoon season is quite adventurous due to strong winds and stormy weather. The safest time to visit is between late December and early May.

ADANG : THE LAND OF CORAL BEAUTY

Adang is a group of islands in the Tarutao National Park, 30 kilometers further south from Tarutau Island. Among the various islands in the Straits of Malacca, Adang is the most enchanting. Its unbeatable beauty and scenic charms has attracted vacationers from faraway lands to visit and revisit the place. Because of these magical charms, the islands were much desired by the colonials powers. Had it not been the wits of Phraya Phuminart Phakdi, then governor of Satun. These islands would have been ceded to the British long ago.

The splendors of Adang are imminent in the crystal clear waters around the island, particularly when the sea is calm. The transparency of the water often leads tourists to take a quick dip, mistaking it to be shallow.

Corals are bountiful in the waters around the island. Tourists diving to admire the breathtaking beauty of the corals may also witness the enchantment of exotic fish such as rock fish, lion fish, cartoon fish, lobsters, or even friendly stingrays buried under the powdery white sands, sea porcupines, and colorful sea shells scattering around the sea floor. These marine creatures move around the limbs of corals with shaped like antlers, hills, lettuces, and mushrooms, some of which move like the flowers of the sea. Adang is truly the coral paradise.

Currently, there is concern that the nature endowed treasures are being encroached upon by selfish people who mistakenly damage them.

Apart from exquisite corals, Adang offers visitors many enchanting places to visit. Large mountainside natural reservoirs, unrelenting sonorous waterfall, crystal clear streams, and long stretched of white sand beaches around the island. particularly at Ao Son where an area is set aside by the National Park to accommodate 150 campers.

To reach Adang, visitors normally take a boat from Pak Bara Pier in Amphoe Langu. Travel can be arranged in advance through the assistance of officials at Tarutau National Park. Most visitors prefer to travel in groups, good for family outings and also saving travelling expenses.

LIPEH : THE LAND OF THE SEA GYSIES

Nearby islands familiar with vacationers are Lipeh or Nipis Island (meaning thin island in Malay). Lipeh is an island in Adang archipelago, one kilometer south, and 25 kilometers west of Tarutao island.

Formerly Lipeh was not inhabited. According to the "Report on the Survey of Tarutau National park" published by Mahidol University in 1977, the first settler on the island was an Indonesian named Hili (pronounced "ngi-li" by the locals). On his business missions, he was a regular traveller to Penang and Siam and found a settlement first in Koh Mai Kadarn Island and married a sea gypsy woman. Later he moved his trading post to Koh Bulone and finally to Koh Lipeh. During his early settlement, he had to travel to Satun to buy rice, using a row boat. He picked up coconuts which floated to the island and planted them there. any fishermen who came to fish near the island were invited to settle on the islan. (According to other sourecs, a man mamed Nai Mahmad had settled on the island one year earlier than had Hili. And the seedlings of coconut trees to be grown on the island were given to Hili by Phraya Phoominart Phakdi then governor of Satun.) In 1909 when the British had shown an interest in the westcoast area of Siam, the governor of Satun brought the people from Koh Sireh in Phuket and Koh Lanta in krabi to settle on Adang in order to prove to the British that the siamese settled there and the island belonged to Siam. The scheme proved furiful and the British agreed to drop the claim over Adang and the nearby area.

Hili and the sea gypsies on Adang Island were the ancestors of the three major families presently residing on the island. namely Harn Thalae, Thalae Luek, and Chamnarn Waree.

The terms Chao Lae (sea people) or Thai Mai (recently naturalized Thais) are generally accepted by the sea gypsies at Lipeh but the term Chao Nam (water people) is despised for the reason that not only themselves but all people are derived from water. Most of inhabitants on Li-peh are Buddhists and engaged in fishing. The housed of the islanders are built on stilts with bamboo woven walls, thatched roofs, and facing the sea, not exceeding 200 meters off shore.

Visitors to the island are likely to stay overnight during the moonlit nights to witness monthly god-offering ceremonial dances performed by the islanders. The dance, performed along with the rhythm of the one-sided drum called Ramana, is organized for three nights during the new moon. It is believed that the god-offering dance will dispel all illnesses and evils from the island. In addition, on the thirteenth to the fifteenth lunar months, the Chao Lae's Longpong and float ceremonies can also be observed.

The prominence of Lip Peh lies on the natural beauty of colorful corals around the island. Particularly fascinating are the ones in the front of the island where visitors can see mazes of colorful corals and exotic tropical fishes under the clear water, a site comparable to a giant aquarium. It often brings with them diving gears of life preservers which enable them to get a close look at the idyllic underwater scenes. The most exciting moment is during the low tide where a large expanse of corals emerge, a rare picturesque scene which will be long remembered by visitor.

To reach Koh Lipeh, visitors often use the same route as that of Adang, from where Lipeh is easily accessible.

Koh Hin Ngarm

(Beautiful Stone Island): Nature's Endowment

Nature Sometimes stupefies man, Because of its natural wonder, Koh Hin Ngarm, part of Adang archipelago, has attracted and inspired visitors from faraway lands to witness the unspoiled beauty of the island.

Koh Hin Ngarm or Koh Puloh possesses beautiful stones polished and shaped by the everlasting waves hitting the shores year after year. The smooth and shiny surfaced stones of various sizes, shapes, and colors are an amazement to the sight of the beholders. On this island one can find these stones in black, blue, brown, red, mixed colors or stripes in round, oval, and other shapes.

The beaches on the island can be best admired when the sun shines and the waves splash on the stones. The shiny glittering surfaces of the stones reflect the glaring sunshine while the blue waves splash the beaches providing ecstasies for those who witness the event of particular joy is the sunset when the last orange rays of the sun touch the pure white foams of the waves giggling on the stones. This memorable scene defies description. One cannot deny that such magical beauties have been blessed by nature for all to admire.

To reach Koh Hin Ngarm, visitors make a stop at Adag or Lipeh Islands first rather than proceeding directly to and staying overnight at Koh Hin Ngarm. This is due to the fact that no accommodation is available on the island which is only 2 kilometers northwest.

Koh Khai

(Khai Island)

A large stone arch or "stone gate" in Koh Khai becomes a logo of Tarutau National Park. During November and January large sea turtles come ashore and lay eggs on the beaches. Beautiful beaches are ideal for swimming. further down are large clusters of beautiful corals which can be seen without diving because the water is transparent, and crystal clear during the tourist season.

Koh Lidi

The Twin Islands

An area off the coast of Amphoe Langu, over one kilometer from Hua Hin village, lies two islands known officially as "Koh Lidi", the islands in the Petra Islands National Park.

Lidi islands are a haven for visitors who want privacy because the islands are small and uninhabited. The only buildings found on the islands belong to the staff of a private company which has been granted a concession of the precious swallow's nests. Although there are thousands of swallows inhabiting the caves, their flocks cannot be seen easily because the caves where they nestle are accessible only by diving along the narrow paths.

The charm of Lidi lies on the twin islands of almost equal size and three or four islets to the south. Normally these islets are under the water, however, during the low tide they emerge along with the sand dunes linking the islands with the islets. Islanders can walk to explore the real, mysterious, and charming ambience created by nature.

The charms of Lidi are not well known to visitors due to the fact that there are many other beautiful places nearby: thus, the site has been overlooked by visitors although it is more convenient to reach than many other islands.

Currently Lidi is the home of the Warden Unit of Petra Islands National Park. Accommodation has been built and camp grounds are provided for visitors for overnight stay.

To reach Lidi, visitors may take a 5 kilometer trip from La-ngu

CCCCCCCCCCCCCCCC

Haad Pak Bara

(Pak Bara Beach)

Haad Pak Bara is located in Tambon pak Nam, Amphoe Langgu. The pristine beach runs along the 4 kilometer road from Langgu to Pak Bara Pier. The casuarina trees on both the sides of the road make the ride pleasant and memorable. Where there is no trees, one can see the sandy beach eaten away by the waves.

The charms of Haad Pak Bara lie not in the sparkling waves or colorful seashells on the sand, but in the numerous picturesque islands which form a panoramic view from the shore. The greyish profile of Langkawi and Tarutao Islands which contrasts the blue horizon adds a precious asset to Pak Bara's tranquillity. Those who have some knowledge of the history of Tarutao are able to appreciate the melancholy and loneliness suffered by those who were detained on the island and those who awaited the return of their loved ones. In those times, Tarutao, surrounded by the impregnable natural fortress of deep sea, was too far a distance to make a getawarp.

The only crowded scene can be experienced at Pak Bara Pier, the end point of La-nge-Pak Bara road, where there are regular boat services for tourists to various islands. The boats are of private ownership. Tarutau National Park, and deep sea fishing boats, berthed on the shore and at the pier for transshipment of goods.

Koh Khao yai

(Big Hill Island)

Koh Khao yai, part of Petra Islands National Park, lies to the west of Pak Bara Pier. Admired from afar, the shape of the island resembles a stone castle. At one end of the island is a natural stone gate which juts into the sea where a small boat can pass through. The area is where the Satun Aquaculture Office is located. On the other side of the island is a large U-shaped bay 700 meters wide, during the low tide, a cluster of corals can be seen parallel with the shores. The waters around the gulf are calm all year round; pearls are cultured here. Tourists can also visit the pearl culture farms.

Koh Khao Yai can be reached by various means of transportation; however, the most convenient way is to take a boat from Pak Bara Pier.

Haad Rawai

(Rawai Beach)

Haad Rawai is also part of Petra Islands National Park. It is located at Village No. 2 and AA Tambon Khon Khlaan, Amphoe Thung Wa, 26 kilometers from the Amphoe office. To get there, drive along La-nug-Thung Wa road; take a turn at the intersection at Baan Wangtong Village No. 4 Tambon Nathorn; take another turn at the intersection that leads to Baan Sila. The beach was once accessible by of motorcycle only but now it can be reached by car.

Hadd Rawai is approximately 3,500 meters long. to the north of the beach lies Khlong (canal) Wang Won and on the west side Koh Sukorn of Amphoe Palian, Trang Province, can be seen. The beach is lined with casuarina trees. It is recommended for camping.

Petra Island National Park

Geographically, Petra Islands are a national park located in the Straits of Malacca in the Andaman Sea of the Indian Ocean. The area is partly under the administrative jurisdiction of Tambon

Koh Skorn, amphoe Palian, Trang Province Tambon Khon Khlaan, Amphoe Thung Wa, and Tambon Pak Nam, Amphoe La-ngu, Satun Province. The park covers 22 islands with a total area (land and sea) of 208,987 rai or an equivalent of 491.38 square kilometers. Thailand-Malaysia borders lie 30 kilometers away to the south of the park.

The Petra Islands National Park was established in 1973 and its establishment was proclaimed in the Royal Gazette in 1994 as the 49 th park in the country's national park system. The main islands which constitute the park are Koh Lidi, Koh Bulone, Koh Khao Yai, and Koh Petra, etc. Because Petra Islands National Park is the host of nature's beauty, virgin forests, untouched mountains, it is flourished with bountiful species of wildlife in addition to the picturesque and colorful corals in the sea. A concession is given to a private company to collect swallows' nests on Koh Lidi, During the low tides, the islands nearby are Linked with the emerged sand dunes, making visits to other islands convenient and exciting. Around the island are rows of coral reefs where fish abound.

Accommodation

Bulone Islands

Bulone Islands are also in the Petra Islands National Park. 22 kilometers from Pak Bara Pier. Of all the islands, Koh Bulone Yai or Bulone Lae is most prominent.

Koh Bulone Lae, Labeled as "Pearl of the Adaman", flourishes with large and small colorful and exotic coral sand species of fish such as tiger fish, starfish, etc. It is a must for underwater enthusiasts who enjoy diving into the world of beauty endowed by nature.

Bulone is not only reputed for its extravagant underwater beauty, it also boasts shady casuarina-lined white sandy beaches, crystal clear navy blue waters, and the charming and hospitable way of life of the Chao Lae inhabitants in addition to its tranquillity and unspoiled nature. It is a mecca for those who seek solitude and true beauty of nature.

Transportation to Koh Bulone

From Hatyai, visitors can use the same modes of transportation and follow the same routes that go to Tarutau. Boats can be boarded at Pak Baa Pier daily leaving at 14:00 hours and returning at 9:00 hours. One way ticket costs Baht 150 per person. The trip takes one and a half-hours.

Facilities

Food and lodging services are available on the island.
